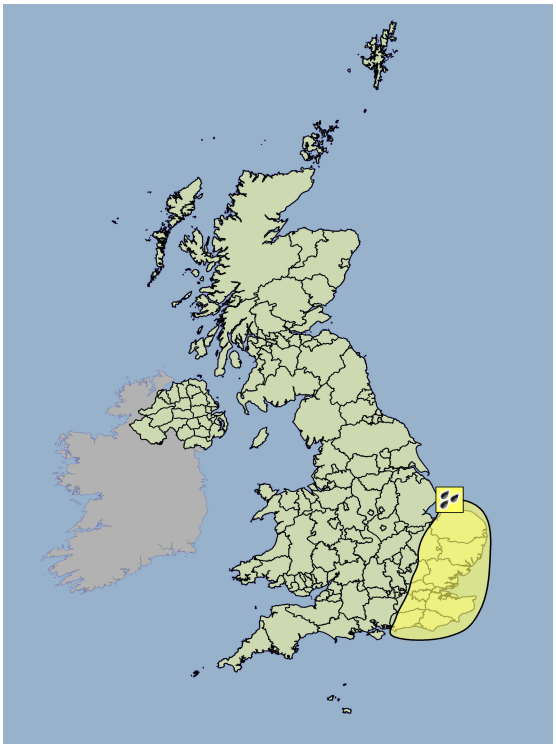
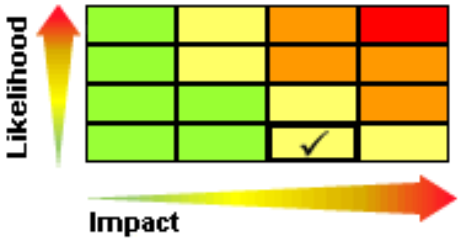
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
An area of heavy showers and thunderstorms developing over France during Saturday may move northwards to affect at least parts of eastern and southeastern England later on Saturday or early on Sunday. There is a chance that these showers and thunderstorms may also affect parts of southern and central England, but at this stage this aspect of the forecast is subject to a greater degree of uncertainty.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 18:00 on Sat, 27th Jul 2013 until 06:00 on Sun, 28th Jul 2013

Heavy showers or thunderstorms may affect at least some southeastern and eastern parts of England later on Saturday or during early Sunday.

The public should be aware of the risk of localised disruption to travel due to surface water flooding.
